

PERFORMANCE BMW

SUPER TOURER

Touring car style for 318iS
complete with PS2 and TV

Stunning M3 Convertible

Z3 CLUB RACER

BMW SHOW PREVIEW

RACING DYNAMICS 528i

DIRECTORY OF BMW SPECIALISTS

318Ci MAKEOVER

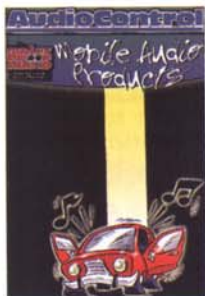

How to modify your E46 Coupe with 18" wheels, brakes, springs, anti-roll bars, exhaust and lights

Ice age

Open your eyes to all the latest in-car goodies and gadgets.

SOUNDS GOOD

Leading US designer and manufacturer of autosound signal processing gear AudioControl has appointed Genesis ICE as its sole UK distributor.

The range includes equalisers, crossovers and special processors all constructed to a highest standard. AudioControl gadgets are an award-winning choice, which have been the choice of serious sound competitors for a long time.

For more information on the AudioControl range just log on to www.audiocontrol.com or if you want to get in contact with Genesis ICE, then dial 01702 611180.

HANDS OFF

How many times has your mobile phone gone off while you're on the move and you couldn't answer it?

'Hands free' kits aren't exactly a new idea, but American company Jabra has come up with a series of kits designed to take into account every eventuality in your everyday life. Four different kits have been released (the EarBud, the EarSet, the EarBoom and the EarWrap).

Those extremely generous people at Jabra furnished PBMW with an example of the EarWrap. Here's what we thought: Convenient, discreet and unobtrusive, in a nutshell.

The EarWrap fits snugly around your ear and feels safe and secure on its 3D pivot, meaning it wasn't about to fall off at an inopportune moment. It comes with a choice of three snap-on boom colours and ear wraps in black, blue or yellow. Colour co-ordination with your clobber just ain't an issue.

Of course, most of us would use the EarWrap, etc, when we're in the car which means road noise is going to be a deciding factor. No problem. Noise hardly interferes at all, even in a car with only a semblance of a passing nod to sound-proofing.

For those of you who are constantly on the move, or are concerned about the alleged threat a mobile phone poses to your brain, a hands-free phone kit makes a bucketload of sense and a Jabra system would definitely be an avenue worth pursuing. If you want more information about the Jabra hands-free mobile phone kits then just log on to www.jabra.com or to find out your nearest stockist call the Jabra helpline on 01784 220179.

REVOLUTION

It's only once in a blue moon that truly innovative products come along for our delectation. G-Net Canada might just have come up with something. The aptly named Revolution Auto PC is a full blown in-car computer system which allows users to play mp3s, digital videos, DVDs and use PC applications in their car, as well as using GPS navigation and the Internet.

The features read like a shopping list, but why put one in your ride car? Well, the whole caboodle is easy to install and ain't much bigger than a Walkman, meaning you needn't have a load of unsightly boxes and wires slapped around the cabin.

Of course, the hardware would be useless without software. Built on the Windows ME/98 platform, the Revolution software allows users to install common applications they use at home and in the office while on the road.

Need more convincing? Check out the installation in an M3 (pictured) or log on to www.gnetcanada.com to see what's what.

DIGITAL DOINGS

Install the Woodstock DAB 52 and digital radio will be at your fingertips. It can also play CD-ROMs and has a slot for multimedia cards, as well as offering a wide choice of stations and crystal clear sound. For more info and a price check out www.blaupunkt.com or pop along to your nearest local in-car hi-fi dealer.

SCHUMIE SOUND

German hi-fi company Magnat has launched an audio system endorsed by none other than Ferrari fiend Michael Schumacher.

The range consists of a two-way S162 co-axial 165 mm speakers (£49.99), S203 tri-axial speaker (£59.99), T1200 12" ported sub-woofer tube (£99.99) and a A4000 four-channel amplifier (£179.99) which comes, somewhat predictably, in red and silver trim. To find your nearest dealer or to find out more about the Schumacher range, log on to www.fryersales.com or pick up the phone and call 0239 269 0999.